7th International PhD Seminar

Culture, Borders, and Gender: Research Trajectories, Emerging Themes, and Interdisciplinary Dialogues in the Contemporary World

February 27-28, 2026
University of Macedonia, Thessaloniki, Greece

CALL FOR PAPERS

The Culture–Borders–Gender Laboratory invites PhD candidates and postdoctoral researchers to participate in the 7th International PhD Seminar, to be held in a hybrid format on 27–28 February 2026 at the University of Macedonia, Thessaloniki, with the option to attend in person or online.

The seminar aims to provide an open, supportive space for presenting work-in-progress research, exchanging constructive feedback, and strengthening academic dialogue among early-career researchers from Greece and abroad. With a strong emphasis on critical interdisciplinarity, the seminar encourages approaches that connect social anthropology with cultural studies, border studies, and gender studies, and with contemporary methodological and digital practices.

We welcome both theoretical contributions and ethnographic case studies that illuminate the complexity of the contemporary world, forms of inequality, power relations, and processes of social and cultural transformation. A key requirement for participation is that presentations must be based on ongoing doctoral research (work in progress) that has not yet been completed or formally approved and has not been published as a standalone academic work.

The seminar's thematic areas highlight the dynamic nature of interdisciplinary research and its importance for interpreting the complexity of the contemporary world. Indicative topics include:

- Cultural practices, rituals, symbols, institutions, and discourses

- Borders, border regimes, and cross-border mobility
- Experiences of minorities, migrants, and refugees
- Gender, gender relations, and the body
- Crisis/crises: humanitarian, environmental, economic, and others
- Literature, arts, language, and translation
- Material culture, space, and monuments
- Digital technologies and audiovisual culture

What we expect from the presentations

The seminar is conceived as a space for dialogue, reflection, and collective learning, where participants are encouraged to share their research as it unfolds. Presentations should be based on ongoing doctoral research (work in progress) and may focus on different stages or aspects of the research process, including:

- the formulation of research questions and initial theoretical orientations
- methodological choices, uncertainties, and fieldwork dilemmas
- early insights, emerging analytical paths, or tentative interpretations
- challenges, difficulties, or open questions that invite discussion and feedback

<h3>Public Event with Invited Speakers</h3>
--

Minorities, Borders, and Memory in the Balkans: Lives at the Margins in the Balkans

Friday 27 and Saturday, 28 February
University of Macedonia & online streaming via Zoom

The event is organised as a dialogue around the anthropological study of minorities, borders, and memory in the Balkans, drawing on both contemporary ethnographic research and classic works of Balkan ethnology. It brings together two interventions that, from different ethnographic and theoretical starting points, examine issues of violence, survival, and mobility, as well as the experiences and practices of local communities amid historical and geopolitical transformations.
